

Manawatu Update

February 2024

In the last few months, I have mostly been concentrating on some card-table evangelism in the city, chaplaincy work in a couple of transitional housing accommodations, and participating in a weekly community meal. These opportunities have not occupied a lot of time but are regular contact with a variety of people and have led to some productive conversations.

Usually for table evangelism I go out with my friend David. At Christmas time he used a Christmas tract to engage in conversation.

At the start of this month, I helped as a parent at a Children's Camp. This was busy but enjoyable. I was able to have regular conversations with people, often with a spiritual content, and had some opportunity for some teaching with the leaders and young campers too. This may lead to some further opportunities at future camps.

Last year I participated in the last Spirituality Fair being hosted with a few friends from Paraparaumu. The organisers' have decided it is no longer viable for them. We had so many conversations at these fairs with spiritually minded people I will look for other opportunities at similar fairs.

I am scheduled for some surgery towards the end of this month and will look at some part-time work opportunities after several weeks' recovery. I have not been able to work for a while and look forward to that as I have many conversations with a wide group of people when I do.
